

Twist For Ease

*A parody of "The Siamese Cat Song" from the Walt Disney Movie "Lady and the Tramp"
(2 Peter 3:16)*

The parody "Twist For Ease" is a parody of the song "The Siamese Cat Song" from the Walt Disney Movie "Lady and the Tramp." This parody is primarily about the Siamese cats.

Disney.com gives the following description: "Twin Siamese cats, Si and Am prowl in harmony, wreaking havoc all around them. Cunning and spiteful, they display the worst traits of their species."

In the same way, those who use God's Word for their own ends prowl and wreak havoc all around them. They can be so cunning that seasoned Christian leaders can fall for their devious, destructive twisting of Scripture to accomplish a life of ease for themselves. When two or more Scripture-twisters join forces, those who disagree can appear to be opposing the very Word of God. Thus godly people can be open for accusation, similar to the words of Aunt Sarah, "Oh, that wicked animal -- attacking my poor innocent little angels."

As humorous as the Siamese cats are in their plotting, the work Scripture twisters is a solemn endeavor. Far more than goldfish are harmed when they take up residence in a church and "stay for maybe quite a while."
